READ THE TEXT. ARE THE STATEMENTS TRUE OR FALSE?

London is a city that is built on water. In the future the problem will be how to hold back that water. The Thames Barrier was built to stop London flooding if the level of the river rose dangerously high after rain. Now the danger comes from the water below London streets.

The city has a rising water table. This means that at some point water will start to get into the basements of many modern, tall buildings. This could cause their foundations to move.

There is a danger zone in central London where many important modern buildings are very much at risk. That risk becomes greater as you travel east from Westminster. In the Docklands area the cost of repair work to threatened buildings could be more than one hundred million pounds.

Many tall buildings in London have a similar design to Lever House in New York, which was built in the 1950s. It is these buildings that are in the greatest danger. The different conditions in New York mean they would be quite safe there, but in London their foundations will suffer if the city's water table continues to rise.

Since 1965 it has risen by nearly twenty metres under central London. Unfortunately, the people who designed the city's new buildings in the 1960s and 70s thought the level would stay as low as ever. As a result of their miscalculations the capital's tallest buildings and deepest tunnels are now in very real danger of flooding.

- 1. The Thames Barrier would stop the river from flooding London.
- 2. Water from the Thames could get into the basements of modern buildings.
- 3. Westminster is the area most at risk from flooding.
- 4. Lever House is in danger of flooding.
- 5. Architects in the 1960s and 70s knew the water table would rise.
